» If you have a heart for people, this course is for you « Sam

As part of Community Ministries, you are the smiling face and helping hand of The Salvation Army for so many people.

Community Ministries is at the heart of The Salvation Army's mission to help people, and often the first contact any person will have with us. This practical and informative course provides a wealth of skills so that you can get the most out of your role within Community Ministries, and offer assistance of the highest calibre to New Zealanders who need it.

Course content

With a week-long block course and hands-on assignments within your workplace, you'll be able to hone your skills to provide the highest level of service for your clients. The course covers key information on:

- Models of practice: working in a strengths-based way to empower your clients
- Self-awareness: knowing how your own culture and background informs your practice
- Safe Practice: ethics, boundaries and effective supervision
- Communication: effective listening and communicating skills
- Practical skills: record keeping, privacy, and working with SAMIS
- The mission: your role within the beliefs and mission of The Salvation Army
- Model of Care: refer below

A highlight for many people attending the block course is the chance to share their knowledge and experiences with other Community Ministry workers around the country.

» I have grown more in knowledge and spirituality at this course than in all the days I have been in my current Community Ministries role « Peter

Who is it for?

Anyone working within Community Ministries—whether you're experienced or new to your role, paid or a volunteer—including community workers, budget advisers, food bank workers, seniors ministries, drop-in helpers, welfare workers, advocates, administrators ... and more.

» I came away with a wealth of knowledge and encouragement «

Janice

Model of Care

- Biculturalism & the Te Tiriti o Waitangi
- The journey with clients through Assessments, Interventions, Outcomes & Evaluations
- The importance of Whanau, Community, Partnership & Spirituality in transforming lives
- Community Ministries values & aims

Note: To reinforce your learning on the course you will be asked to prepare and present some relevant coursework both before and after the course, so please be prepared to allocate some time for this.
